Alexandria Gazette

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 13, 1878.

The Second Battle of Manassas. During the trial of Gen. Fitz John Porter at West Point, Thursday, Mr. John S. Leachman of Groveton Prince William county, Va. was recalled and closely examined as to the supposed route of Captain Pope bearing the 4:30 order from General Pope to General Porter, commanding the latter to move against the enemy. It was charged in the proceedings of the court martial that the order reached Porter at five o'clock p. m. The latter stoutly avers that it did not get into his hands till between six and seven p. m.

The testimony of Mr. Leachman, who had been a resident in the locality for fifty years, showed that it was a physical impossibility for Captain Pope to go over the route. Witness supposed he did go in less than an hour and a half which would make his arrival at Porter's headquarters not before 6 p. m., providing the order was handed to him at the precise time it was dated and he rode at the utmost speed.

Colonel Charles Marshall, a lawyer of Baltimore, and who was an aid de camp for General Lee, of the Confederate army, in 1862, was sworp. He said that twelve confederate brigades marched through Thoroughfare Gap on the 28th, and one on the morning of the 20th. About half past cine the advance was near Groveton. Then witness located the position of the confederate troops, and said that as late as two p. m. General Stewart reported that General Jones' right was being threatened, and General Wilcox was ordered to go to his support. Later in the afternoon Hood was attacked, and Wilcox was sent back. The troops threatening Jones appeared to be comicg along the Manassas and Gainesville road, and six brigades had to be kept there to watch them.

This was considered important evidence for Porter, as it was his command that threatened the Confederates, and thus it is claimed he noted discreetly and held the Confederates in check, preventing them from carring out an intended general attack that day.

Witness stated that he had in his hand Lee's original report of the second Bull Run battle. He said General Lee did not make an attack on the 29th for the reason that Longstreet advised against it. This witness also denied positively that there was a general battle on Gordonsville .. the 29th, as indicated in Pope's dispatch.— There was some artillery firing, and Hood had a severe fight, but it did not become general.
